PROCEEDINGS

Session Will Go Down in History as One of Intense Bitter Personalities Caused by Differences of Opinion on the Financial Condition of the City and the Conduct of its Affairs.-Pass the Ordinance Changing the Grade of Bluff

The meeting of the council Monday evening was marked by a very acrimomious debate over the city's finances, with Mayor F. S. Tucker, City Attorney Olmsted and W. H. Thompson as the debaters. It all started over the report of the city attorney on the petitions that had been presented to the council touching on the possibility of an overdraft and questioning the legality of the appropriation ordinance.

The city attorney's report branded and denied that the council had taken into consideration the $4,000 of school money that the treasurer had collected. He said the figures presented in the estimate of expenses for the coming year had been obtained from the records of the county assessor and city treasurer and that those figures, $9,500, were correct and the levy to raise that sum was a 23 mill levy. He said the council two years ago had put their estimate of expenses at $9,100 or a 21 mill levy with a less assessed valuation and if it was right then, why not now? He said the estimate had been published for four power auto. weeks in the Tribune and everybody had plenty of time to object, but no one had done so, nor said a word, or raised a doubt until over a month afterwards. He said there was no outstanding contracts to be paid and to Washington to baptise a baby for that the council had every intention H. C. Christensen. of staying well within the law. He advised everybody to more closely scrutinize petitions in the future so they would not be deceived by false figures juggled to suit the occasion.

W. H. Thompson asked permission to say a few words because he wrote that petition at the request of a man whose name was not even signed to the petition and said that he had obtained the figures from the annual report of the city treasurer which showed that the collections for last year had only been about $7,000 of which $4,000 was school money and that the treasurer had taken up about $9,000 in warrants, whereat Mr. Olmsted wanted to know how it was possible for the treasurer to take up $9,000 worth of warrants on $3,000 worth of collections. Then things warmed up considerable, especially when Mr. Thompson made the statement that the city was already overdrawn some $600 or $700. edie Francaise, but a Comedie Fran-

Mayor Tucker said he was going to talk right out in meeting, and he did. He said he thought the whole matter was but spite work and a get even game played to discredit the administration so these people who were kicking could get into office.

The city clerk then presented his report of what he thought the city's finances were and his figures were entirely different from those of either the city attorney or Mr. Thompson. His figures showed something like $6,000 still in the funds unexpended.

Ordinance 276 was then placed on its third reading and after making some typographical changes was passed. This is the ordinance changing the grade of Bluff street.

Ordinance 277 for cement walks in various parts of the city was then taken up and after cutting out some of the walks was said over until the next regular meeting. George Sorenson called attention to the bad condition of the street car tracks on Briggs street and the street and alley committee was instructed to get busy. Councilman Feldhusen and Mr. Nelson called the attention of the council to the fact that the walk laid in front of Mr. Nelson's property on Bluff street was only 2 inches thick when the specifications called for a 4 inch walk. They claimed that the inspector was not doing his duty when he allowed such walks to go down. The condition of the walk would never have been discovered had not the walk cracked from the frost. The council will order the contractor to properly repair the walk and if he does not will go after the bondsmen. The following bills were then allewed: Omaha Water Co. $870.00

Charles Cottrell, $63.70 Florence Coal & Lumber Co., $26.25 George Siert, $6.45 F. S. Tucker, $25.00 R. H. Olmsted, $62.50 John Bondesson, $40.74 George Siert, $37.50 Charles Allen, $12.50 J. H. Price, $12.50 Carl Feldhusen, $12.50 Robert Craig, $12.50. Dr. Horton, $12.50

"Eleven years ago, monsieur,' he answered, without lifting his eyes from his cork, 'eleven years ago, on this very spot, I had an excellent bite."-Washington Star.

Deaf Hear at Telephone. Among the many curiosities of the telephone and one which certainly never was thought of when the instrument was invented, is the fact that persons who are extremely deaf often can hear perfectly over the tele phone. Those who are so deaf that they can distinguish nothing which is said to them except by the motion of the lips or by the use of an ear trumpet or other similar device can carry on long distance telephone conversations with perfect ease and never miss a word,

DEATH TAKES CHAS. TAYLOR SOCIAL

Florence Man Succumbs to an Unknown Disease at an Omaha Hospital Saturday.

Charles Taylor, aged 40, who has been living in the Rose building on Main street, died at an Omaha hospital Saturday following a stomach disorder, which physicians were unable to diagnose.

Friday Taylor visited the Omaha police station and complained of being ill. Physicians summoned, prescribed for him, and he was given a cot inside the cell room.

Not improving Saturday, Taylor was sent to the hospital, where he died several hours later in terrible agony.

The only solution of Taylor's death is his statement to the police Friday Finkenkeller, Mr. Faris and Mr. that he had shortly before taken a drink in a saloon with a stranger.

Taylor is survived by a widow and family. He left his family in destitute cir umstances. The death of Charles Taylor, the Florence man who died at St. council looking to the paving of Main Joseph's hospital Saturday from an unknown malady, was caused by a perforating ulcer of the stomach according to disclosures made at the autopsy which was held Monday afternoon by Doctors McClennaghen Jeweler-Yes, I know, and you gave $25 for the ticket.

Customer-How do you know that? Jeweler-I am sorry to inform you, my dear sir, but you have been swindled. Let me ask you, did you not read an advertisement in a newspaper offering the ticket for sale?

Customer-Yes, I did. But I'm not fool enough to believe that a pawnbroker would lend $250 on a ring that is worth only $190. Why, everybody knows that pawnbrokers, as a rule, lend only one-third the value on any article, no matter what it is.

Jeweler-Entirely wrong, my friend. A pawnbroker might not lend you quite the actual value of your jewelry. but he will lend himself a great deal more than the article is worth, and then give the ticket to a friend to advertise for sale. Do you catch the drift of what I mean? The pawn-ticket bargain hunter begins to see a great light, but he is not satisfied until he has paid at least three lewelers one dollar each to tell him that he has been robbed.

The crooked pawnbroker simply takes a ring out of stock, puts it up in a package and pins on it a ticket with a fake name, indicating that on a certain day the ring has been pledged

The dpulicate ticket is turned over to the confederate, who then inserts an advertisement in an evening newspaper which reads as follows:

"Owing to financial embarrassment I am compelled to dispose of a pawn ticket for beautiful diamond ring pledged for $150; worth $250; only one month's interest due. Will sell cheap. Address Needy, 176, this office."

The sucker may have had some experience with pawnbrokers, and he knows well enough they are too shrewd to lend $150 on a ring unless it is worth considerably more than that amount. He makes an appointment with "Needy" and takes a look at the ticket. The holder wants $25 for the ticket, but finally comes down to $10. In fact, he will take almost anything

Very well. You pay $10 for the ticket and go at once to redeem the pledge. The interest on $150 at two per cent. for one month is three dollars, making the ring cost you in all $106. Any jeweler will tell you it is worth only

CHAPTER I.

The Vanishing Mystery. Flora Gilsey stood on the threshold of her dining room. She had turned her back on it. She swayed forward. Her bare arms were lifted. Her hands lightly caught the molding on either side of the door. She was looking intently into the mirror at the other end of the hall. All the lights in the dining room were lit, and she saw herself rather keenly set against this brilliance. The straight-held head, the lifted arms, the short, slender waist, the long, long sweep of her skirts made her seem taller than she actually was; and the strong, bright growth of her hair and the vivacity of her face made her seem more deeply colored.

She had poised there for the mere survey of a new gown, but after a moment of dwelling on her own reflection she found herself considering it only as an object in the foreground of a picture. That picture, seen through the open door, reflected in the glass, was all of a bright, hard glitter, all a high, harsh tone of newness. In its paneled oak, in its glare of cut-glass and silver, in the shining vacant faces of its floors and walls, there was not a color that filled the eye, not a shaddow where imagination could find play. As a background for herself it struck her as incongruous. Like a child looking at the landscape upside down, she feit herself in a foreign country. Yet it was hers.

She glanced over the table. It was set for three. It lacked nothing but the serving of dinner. She looked at the clock. It wanted a few minutes to the hour. Shima, the Japanese butler, came in softly with the evening papers. She took them from him. Nothing bored her so much as a paper, but to-night she knew it contained something she really wanted to see. She opened one of the damp sheets at the page of sales.

There it was at the head of the column in thick black type: AT AUCTION, FEBRUARY 18 PERSONAL ESTATE OF ELIZABETH HUNTER CHATWORTH CONSISTING OF — She read the details with interest down to the end, where the name of the "famous Chatworth ring" finished the announcement with a flourish. Why "famous"? it was very provoking to advertise with that vague adjective and not explain it.

She turned indifferently to the first page. She read a sentence, re-read it, read it again. Then, as if she could not read fast enough, her eyes galloped down the column. It was the most extraordinary thing! She was bewildered with the feeling that what was blazing at her from the columns of the paper was at once the wildest thing that could possibly have happened, and yet the one most to have been expected.

been sinister, from as far back as the tragedy-the end of poor young Chatworth and his wife—the Bessie, who, before her English marriage, they had all known so well. Her death, that had befallen in far Italian Alps, had made a sensation in their little city, and the large announcements of auction that had followed hard upon it had bred among the women who had known her a morbid excitement, a feverish desire to buy, as if there might be some special luck in them, the jewels of a woman who had so tragically died. They had been ready to make a social affair of the private view held in the "Maple room" before the acution. And now the whole spectacular business was capped by a sensation so dramatic as to strain eredulity to its limit. She could not believe it; yet here it was glaring at her from the first page. Still-it might be an exaggeration, a mistake; She must go back to the beginning and read it over slowly.

The striking of the hour hurried her. Shima's announcement of dinner only sent her eyes faster down the page. But when, with a faint, stacoth rustle, Mrs. Britton came in, she let the paper fall. She always fased her chaperon with a little nervousness, and with the same sense of strangeness with which she so frequently regarded her house. "It's 15 minutes after eight." Mrs.

Britton observed. "We would better not wait any longer." She took the place opposite Flora's "Vanished!" Clara Britton leaned forward, peering hard in the face of this extraordinary statement. "Stolen, do you mean?" She made it definite.

Flora flung out her hands. "Well, it disappeared in the Maple room, in the middle of the afternoon, when everybody was there-and they haven't the faintest clew."

"But how?" For a moment the preposterous fact left Clara too quick to be calm.

Again Flora's eloquent hands. "That is it! It was in a case like all the other jewels. Harry saw it"-she glanced at the paper—"as late as four o'clock. When he came back with Judge Buller, half an hour after, it was gone."

Flora leaned forward on her elbows, chin in hands. No two could have differed more than these two women in their blondness and their prettiness and their wonder. For Clara was sharp and pale, with silvery lights in eyes and hair, and confronted the facts with an alert and calculating observation; but Flora was tawny, toned from brown to ivory through all the gamut of gold-hair color of a panther's hide, eyes dark hazel, glinting through dust-colored lashes, chin round like a fruit. The pressure of her fingers accented the slight uptilt of her brows to elfishness, and her look was introspective. She might, instead of wondering on the outside, have been the very center of the mystery itself, toying with un thinkable possibilities of revelation. She looked far over the head of Clara Britton's annoyance that there should

Though I would prefer to think it was some one we didn't know so well-some one strange and fascinating, who will presently go slipping out the Golden Gate in a little junk boat, so that no one need be embarrassed."

Clara looked back with extraordi nary intentness.

"Oh, it's not possible the thing is stolen. There's some mistake! And if it were"-her eyes seemed to open a little wider to take in this possibility-"they will have detectives all Any one would find it difficult to get i away," she pointed out.

"Of course; I know," Flora mur mured. A faint twitch of humor pulled her mouth, but the passionate romantic color was dying out of her face. How was it that one's romances could be so cruelly pulled down to earth? But still she couldn't quite come down to Clara. "At least," she sighed, "he has saved me an awful expense, whoever took it, for I should have had to have it."

Mrs. Britton surveyed this state ment consideringly. "Was it the most valuable thing in the collection?

Flora hesitated in the face of the alert question. "I-don't know. But it was the most remarkable. It was a Chatworth heirloom, the papers say, and was given to Bessie at the time of her marriage." The thought of the getting to the point. death that had so quickly followed shiver, but no shade of the tragedy touched Clara. There was nothing early, at half-past two, before the but speculation in Clara's eyes-that, crowd; fail to meet you there." He they will put off the auction-if it is really so," she mused.

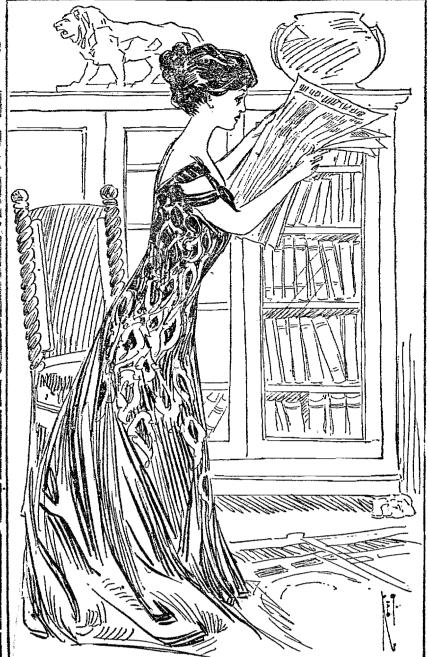

"But there must be something in it Clara. Why, they closed the doors and searched them-that crowd! It's ridiculous!'

Clara Britton glanced at the empty place. "Then that must be what has kept him."

"Who? Oh, Harry!" It took Flora a moment to remember she had been expecting Harry. She hoped Clara had not noticed it. Clara always had too much the assumption that she was taking him only as the best-looking, best-natured, safest bargain presented. "He will be here," she reassured, "but I wish he would hurry. His dinner will be spoiled; and poor dear, he likes his dinner so much!"

The faint silver sound of the electric bell, a precipitate double peal. seemed to uphold this statement. The women faced each other in a moment's suspense, a moment of expectation, such as the advance column may feel at sight of a scout hotfoot from the field of battle. There were muffled movements in the hall, then light, even steps crossing the drawing room. Those light steps always sug gested a slight frame, and, as always Flora was re-surprised at his bulk as now it appeared between the parted curtains, the dull black and sharp white of his evening clothes topped by his square, fresh-colored face.

"Well, Flora," he said, "I know I'm late," and took the hand she held fo him from where she sat. Her face danced with pleasure. Yes, he was magnificent, she thought, as he cross-Mrs. Britton paused mildly with a ed with his light stride to Mrs. Britradish in her fingers. She took in ton's chair. "What was it like?" Flora demanded.

"Like?" Harry turned a speculative eye to the dull glow of the candelabrum, as if between its points of flame he conjured up the vision of the vanished jewel. "Like a bit of an old gold heathen god curled round himself, with his head, which was mostly two yellow sapphires, between his knees, and a big, blue stone on top. Soft, yellow gold, so fine you could almost dent it. And carved! Even through a glass every line of it is right. I couldn't seem to get away from it. I dropped into the club and talked to Buller about it. He got keen, and I went back with him to have another look at it. Well, at the door Buller stops to speak to a chap going out-a crazy Englishman he had picked up at the club. I go on. By this time there's a crowd inside, but I manage to get up to the case. And first I miss the spot altogether. And then I see the card with his hole in the velvet where the god had have been the man himself? been."

"But does no one know anything? Has no one an idea?" Clara almost panted in her impatience.

"Not the ghost of a glimmer of a clue. There were upward of two hundred of us, and they let us out like a chain-gang, one by one. My number was 193, and so far I can vouch there were no discoveries. It has vanished -sunk out of sight."

Flora sighed. "Oh, poor Bessie Chatworth!"

She felt that she had been stupid where she should have been most delicate. "But you don't understand," she protested, leaning far toward him as if to coerce him with her generous warmth. "The Chatworth ring was nothing but a fancy I had. I never thought of it for a moment as an engagement ring!" By the light stir of silk she was aware that Clara had risen. She looked up quickly to encounter that odd look. Clara's face was so smooth, so polished, so unruffled, as to appear almost blank, but none the less Flora saw it all in Clara's eye-a look that was not new to her. It was the same with which Clara had met the announcement of her engagement: the same look with which she had confronted every allusion to the approaching marriage; the same with which she now surveyed the mention of the engagement ring-a look neither approving nor dissenting, whose calm, considerate speculation seemed to repudiate all interest positive or negative in the approaching event except the one large question, "What is to become of me?" Many times Clara had held it up before her, not as a question, certainly not as an accusation; as a flat assertion of fact; but to-night Flora felt it so directly and imperatively aimed at her that it seemed this time to demand an audible response. And Clara's way of getting up, and standing there, with her gloves on, poised and expectant, as if she were only waiting on oportunity to take farewell took on in the light of her look, the fantastic appearance of a final departure. "I'm afraid," she mildly reminded them, "that Shima announced the carriage ten minutes ago!" "Oh, dear, I'm so sorry!" Flora's eyes wavered apologetically in the direction of the waiting Japanese. Clara's flicker of amusement made her hate herself the moment it was out. She could always depend on herself when she knew she was on exhihition. She could be sure of the right thing if it were only large enough, but she was still caught at odd moments by the trifles, the web of a certain social habit into which she had slipped, full-grown on the smooth surface of her father's million's. Clara's fleeting smile lit up these trifles to her now as enormous. It took advantage of her small deficit to point out to her more plainly than ever to what large blunders she might be liable when she had cut loose from Clara's guiding, reminding, prompting genius, and chose to confront the world without it.

To be sure, she was not to confront it alone; but, looking at Harry, it came to her with a moment's qualm that she did not know him as well as she thought she had.

and after three years it was still the only thing that held them. As much of a fight as she had put up with the rest-the people who had taken her in she had put up the hardest with Clara. Yet of them all Clara was the only one she had failed to capture. Clara was always there in the middle of her affairs, but surveying them from a distance, and Flora's struggle with her had resolved itself into the attempt to keep her from seeing too much, from seeing more than she herself saw.

Their dubious intimacy had created for Flora a special sort of loneliness a loneliness which lacked the security of solitude; and it was partly as an escape from this that she had accepted Harry Cressy. By herself she could never have escaped. The initiative was not hers. But he had presented himself, he had insisted, had overruled her objections, had captured her before she knew whether she wanted it or not—and held her now, fascinated by his very success in capturing her, and by his beautiful ruddy masculinity. She did not ask herself whether women ever married for greater reasons than these. She only wondered sometimes if he did not stand out more brilliantly against Clara and the others than he intrinsically was. But these moments when she was obliged to defend him to herself were always when he was not with her. Even in the dusky carriage she had been as aware of the splendor of his attraction as now when they had stopped between the high lamps of the club entrance, and she saw clearly the broad lines of his shoulders and the stoop of his squareset head as he stepped swingingly to the pavement. After all, she ought to be glad to think that he was going to stand up as tall and protectingly bebetween her and the world, as now he did between her and the press of people which, like a tide of water, swept them forward down the hall, sucked them back in its eddy, and finally cast them, ruffled like birds that have ridden a storm, on the more generous space of the wide, upward stair.

From here, looking down on the current sweeping past them, the little islands of black coats seemed fairly drowned in the feminine sea around them-the flow of white, of pale blue and rose, and the high chatter, like a cage of birds, that for the evening held possession.

"Ladies' Night!" Harry Cressy mopped his flushed face.

Flora laughed in the effervescence of her spirits. She wanted to know, teasingly, as they mounted, if this were why he had brought two more to add to the lot. He only looked at She wondered, as he heaped her er- that made her keenly conscious of his her, with his short note of laughter proud of herself, self was shown in the long trail of daring blue her gown made up the stair, and the powdery blue of the aigrette that shivered in her bright, before their eyes without people in San Francisco, and to her new eyes daring, as it appeared in these things, was still discriminating enough to make her right.

And to-night it was not the picture exhibition, nor the function itself that elated her, but the fancy she had as she looked over the moving mass below her that the crowning excitement of the day, the vanishing mystery, hovered over them all. It was fantastic, but it persisted; for had not the Chatworth ring itself proved that the most ordinary appearance to be a creature of a keen, a fairly might cover unimagined wonders? Which of those bland, satisfied faces whisper "Chatworth" in its ear? She wanted to confide the naughty thought If Harry were apprehensive of anything at all it was only of being caught in too hot a crush. He saw no possibilities in the mob below exkeener ridicule. THE RUDDER

THE RUDDER

Of any business is advertising. It will guide the boat of business safely into the harbor of success if properly handled. There is nothing magic about handling the "rudder." It simply requires good, common sense English language, displayed in the best newspaper in the plainest possible way. If you would guide your business to the front in your particular line, advertise to the most intelligent and well-to-do people in this community through the Tribune.

There is one funny thing about the city finances. At the meeting Monday evening there were presented three sets of figures as to the condition of the city funds and none agreed. Both Mr. Thompson and the city attorney say they secured their figures from the city clerk, which the clerk affirmed, but at the meeting the clerk presented an entirely different set of figures. What the Tribune wants to know is why, if the estimates as published in the Tribune were wrong, there was no kick before the appropriation ordinance was passed. Can't it be possible they passage.

Tobacco Patch in Heart of City.

Probably the most up-to-date tobacco patch in the whole white burley district is the four-acre piece of land in Lexington, Ky., on which W. L. Petty will this year raise a crop of the valuable plants.

First-class tobacco land is at a high premium these days and Mr. Petty paid about as much rent for the use of this city lot as he would have for a good sized office building. The land, however, has every advantage which could possibly be desired for the purpose to which it has been dedicated. It is virgin soil, in the heart of the city, within 34 blocks of the Phoenix hotel, is supplied with electric lights, Fay. city water hydrants and concrete sidewalks on the adjoining street, on the corner of which is a police patrol and fire department box, and is thus in every way furnished with every protection and convenience afforded to the business of a good sized city.

Fire

We have no evidence of the time when man did not have the knowledge of producing fire. It is certain that man possessed fire as far back as Quarternary time. In the case of the earliest cave men we find numerous hearths, ashes and cinders, bone wholly or partly calcined, and fragments of pottery blackened by smoke. As Its a pretty cheap sort of a man far back as we can go we find man cooking his food. As to how men came by their knowledge of fire there is room for a wide difference of opinion. Its use was probably first known in some volcanic region, where it was suggested by nature itself. Then came the two sticks, and later on the flints, by means of which men could

The New Art.

A fashionable painter, noted for his prolific output, was discussing at a and your name and address at the studio tea in New York a recent scandal in the picture trade. "Look here, old man," said G. Innis Kerr, the etcher, "do you paint all your own pictures?"

"I do," the other answered, botly. "and with my own hands, too."

"And what do you pay your hands?"
Mr. Kerr inquired. "I'm thinking of starting an art factory myself."

Aims and the Man.

"Sure Father Flaherty was a good man," Mr. Murphy said of the deceased parish priest. "He hated sin but he loved th' sinner, an' he was all compassion an' patience an' wisdom. There never was another loike 'im f'r holdin' up hope to th' poor batthered man that had anny desire f'r good.

"'Faith,' said he to Con Meehan, th' tolme th' bh'y was down an' out, 'faith, this soide av paradise 'tist all beginning again, over an' over, an' tin toimes over!'

"An' that keen," continued Mr. Murphy, "'twas niver worth whoile to keep back part av th' price av th' land! Wid a twinkle in his eye he'd see clean through anny Ananias that iver walked.

"An' gin'rous!" Mr. Murphy's voice dropped to a lower key and his eyes were wet as he added, "His hand was always in his pockut, an' whin they prepared him f'r burial they found his right arm longer than his left wid stretchin' it out to th' poor."-Youth's Companion.

How She Conciliated Them. Filmer-How did it bappen that these five men who were so sagry with the woman in the nickelodeon for not taking off her hat became so friendly with her afterward?

Screeners-It was raining like fury when the show was over and she invited them to take shelter with her under her hat.

The peril of the four young men who put out upon Lake Michigan in a gasoline launch with a supply of fuel close to exhaustion should remind motor yachtsmen that a small boat without power is helpless in comparison with a sailing yacht. The latter can be handled so that she will be safe in the roughest of weather, while the powerless motor boat must wallow and take what comes, unless those in charge of her have seamanship enough to rig a sea anchor and ride behind it while awaiting succor.

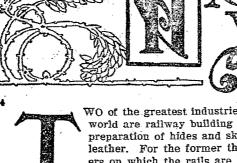

Cheer up, estronomers! Mars isn't going to run away, anyhow,

The ice cold geyser discovered in Yellowstone park not only upsets the accepted theory as to the origin of pe riodical natural fountains, but adds a feature of economic value to the scene of natural wonders. Heretofore tour ists have been able to catch fish and swing them from the river into a geyser basin of hot water, to be cooked while still upon the book. Now they will be able to catch the fish and swing them into cold storage.

Meat has dropped half a cent a pound in Chicago, but that's a long way to go to save a half cent.

New records are made by flying machines almost daily. France comes forward with the most notable achievement with an aeroplane carrying two persons. One of these airships, with two army officers as passengers, flew from the starting point to the gates of Paris, a distance of 105.6 miles, in two hours and fifty minutes. The times seems to be at hand when the mashines will engage in regular tarffic.

So long as a three hour ride in a German airship costs $50 most of the population of Germany will be satisfied with something less perilous.

WO of the greatest industries in the world are railway building and the preparation of hides and skins into leather. For the former the sleepers on which the rails are laid are essential and costly factors; for the latter nothing can take the place of some vegetable extract which is the tanning substance of the trade. Sleepers can be made of glass and metal, but these do not give the satisfaction of those made of wood. The oak and the hemlock have for ages supplied tannin by which leather is cured; in fact, the very word tann implies by its derivation its relation to the oak, by which name the tree was called in old Breton language. Railway sleepers have been made from the oak, but the expense grows higher year by year. No wonder, therefore, that the earth is scoured for trees to furnish either the one or the other or both of the substances, and no wonder also that manufacturers and builders hailed with delight the announcement a few years ago of the availability for both purposes of the Youth American tree called "Quebracho."

Quebracho is a contraction of the colloquial Spanh and Portuguese term quiebra-hacha, originally applied to many trees in Latin America. It means 'ax breaker," and the character is implied in this pleaning. The wood is hard, fine grained, and tough and had been used by the natives for ages in their primitive construction work. Of recent years, however, quebracho is restricted in the arts and industries to a particular tree found only in South America, and even here only within broad limts of the drainage basin of the River Parana. In Cuba there is a "quebracho," so-called locally, which is a member of the Copaiba family. In Chile a quebracho is rather of the Cassia family, and probably in other parts of Latin America the name is indiscriminately given to any hard wood that has tested the metal of the native's ax. No such indefinite use of the word, however, can be permitted today, because the tree of the South American Chaco has become so commercially important that it must be understood to signify only that one tree and nothing else.

DESTOFALLSON

A SAWMILL BETWEEN "THE CHACO AND CIVILIZATION

The genuine quebracho tree is found in Brazil, Paraguay, and the Argentine Republic. There are two important varieties and a third has been distinguished, although it has no great significance botanically or value commercially. Locally and in the trade the names given are Quebracho colorado (red), and Quebracho blanco (white). Quebracho colorado has the scientific designation of Loxopterygium lorentzii, and belongs to the order of Anacardiaciae. This is the particular tree from which both the sleepers and the better quality of tanning extract are derived. The other, Quebracho bianco, is neither so straight nor so serviceable as the red variety but is nevertheless of definite commercial value, as it furnishes some tanning extract and the logs can be used for fence posts and axles. From it is taken also a drug extensively used for bronchial diseases; in fact, as a plant it was studied for this purpose long before its other advantages were exploited. The scientific name is Aspidosperma quebracho.

Railways must have sleepers on which to lay their rails. In some instances wooden ones are imported at great expense, or substitutes therefor are used if climatic conditions are favorable. As a rule, however, it is preferred to take supplies from pative timber whenever procurable. This was the case in the Argentine Republic when rallway building away from the coast had begun, and no more fitting wood could be discovered than that recommended by the natives, both by the name and by the experience of those who had used it. The quebracho wood proved by far the most serviceable for sleepers on South American railways, and its reputation grew so steadily that today many miles of European rails are supported by sleepers brought from the River Plate.

In one respect quebracho resembles rather mahogany than oak or pine. The trees do not grow in clumps or groves, but are dispersed through the forests and the less dense woods, singly or in groups seldom more than four or five to the acre. The tree itself is tall, about two or three feet in diameter, and is crowned by a rather thin, oval, or V-shaped, mass of branches and leaves. The white quebracho is somewhat smaller than the red, and begins to branch lower to the ground, so that it is not hard to distinguish them from each other. The leaves are oval, or lance shaped, smooth, somewhat shining and leathery: they do not fall completely in the winter, but cling to the branches in company with the fruit. The tree seems to thrive best on a sandy soil, where the atmospheric moisture is not very great, but where thundant water is provided for the roots, either by dews or sufficient rain. It is neither a mountain nor a river growth, but lives best in the subtropical stretches between water courses. Although the age of the tree has been given as measured by hundreds of years, it is well enough established that at ten years from planting the first small shrubs are big enough to use for posts The future promises, therefore, an opportunity for the actual cultivation of quebracho, because, although savage inroads have been made into the supposedly inexhaustible forests of the Chaco, it is not too late to restrict the cutting of the tree, or even to adopt modern forestry methods of planting and conservation for the supply of coming generations. In fact, the Argentine Republic a ready passed suitable laws in this direction. is more than probable that under the wise wion of that government there will be developed an arboricultural industry to proceed hand in hand with the preparation of quebracho posts for fences and construction work, sleepers for railways, and of tanning extract, the three industries for which this unique tree is at present

"Rollizos" is the Spanish word commonly employed in the trade for the rough and untrimmed logs (which the word means), from which only the bark has been removed. They are still supplied by smaller camps from dwarfed undergrowth not great enough for other purposes than posts, beams, cabin pillars, or cart axles. When the forest was first invaded these logs were the only product brought out of it, and the stories told of the primitive methods adopted by the natives for transport carry one back before the days of steam and machinery. A popular way of loading the logs was to lay them on the ground on ropes; then the animals were unharnessed and the cart was tilted bodily upside down over the logs; these were then made fast to the body of the cart. after which maneuver it was brought back to its normal position. Of course only two-wheeled carts were used. As soon as modern methods were introduced, and better carts or wagons became known, these primitive and cumbersome habits disappeared, although in the far interior even today rollizos are still brought to market in this manner. "Durmientes," according to the Spanish, or sleepers, in the English idiom, are probably the most important product of the quebracho of the Afgentine Republic.

The industry of making sleepers has assumed huge proportions. The difficulties of former days have been largely overcome by the introduction of modern machinery, especially saws, and some of the mills many miles distant from any main railway are equipped and organized in a manner which would reflect credit on any similar plant in the United States. Special saws are needed to penetrate the wood, but they are furnished from the factories of England, France, and America. This mill business is carried on by many companies, although the tendency is to concentrate the management into fewer but larger organizations. One company owns a tract of land of about 4,000,000 acres, and is prepared to cut timber, fashion it into logs and sleepers, prepare tanning extract, and utilize every other resource which the land provides. Another company can turn out 20,000 to 20,000 sleepers a week. This number, however, can by no means meet the steady demand for railway building which is characteristic of this portion of South America. Sleepers are laid at about an interval of two feet from center to center. Assuming, therefore, only 2,000 sleepers for every mile, it will be seen that 30,000 are enough for only 15 miles. A year's supply at fullest capacity will consequently build only 750 miles of railway. But the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Chile and Bolivia, all contiguous to the Chaco, are constructing more than this mileage, so that it is easy to see that every sleeper turned out from modern mills can at once find a local, market. These sleepers are now finished at the mill, and the mill is situated at the spot in the forest itself most convenient for carrying on the process.

Quebracho extract prepared for tanning skins and hides into leather is, however, the most serviceable product of the tree. All the timber companies are adjusting their plants so as to utilize the wood, either In its entire output, or in that portion not reserved for posts and sleepers, for this extract. In Paraguay and areas in the Chaco remote from good roads, so that the cost of supplying timber is excessive, every particle of the wood is turned into extract, because the demand is usually in advance of the supply, and it is therefore more profitable to manufacture the more concentrated article, which can be easier and more economically carried to market.

One feature of quebracho, in which it is superior to other sources of supply, is that the bark, the sapwood, and the whole of the central part of the tree produce the extract in considerable quantities. The bark contains 6 to 8 per cent, of tannin, the sap 3 to 5 per cent., and the heart 20 to 25 per cent. As the heart represents two-thirds and often three-fourths of the total quantity of wood, the amount of tannin in the Quebracho colorado is seen to be considerable. It is merely a chemical question whether this tanning material is equal or inferior to that from the cak, but later methods of preparation point to a full justification of the claim that the leather from quebracho extract grades up to that resulting from any other tanning substance. So serviceable is it, however, that since its discovery, the tanning industry of the Argentine Republic has made noticeable advance, because, with both hides and extract as great natural products of the country, the government is making every effort to foster the leather industry within its own border.

"Quebracho extract," as it is called in the trade is easily manufactured when the machinery is once installed. All the wood is passed through a machine that cuts it into shavings or the smallest possible chips. It is then collected into immense kettles, in which it is treated by chemical processes until all the tannin is removed; after this the fluid preparation is reduced by evaporation to a thick, felly-like mass, which is poured into sacks, where it is finally dried into the substance sold in commerce.

The difficulty of gathering the raw material far outweighs the preparation of the finished article, especially as-the extract is no longer to be considered a by-product, but is coming to have more importance and value than posts and sleepers. In Paraguay particularly, where all the wood is utilized for extract, the hardest part of the business lies in gathering wood for the factory. The trees are cut in the heart of the virgin forest and hauled by ox teams to the nearest clearing. Only native Indians have proven themselves suitable for the work, as they are thoroughly acclimated. understand the wilderness, and can withstand the plague of insects which make life at night miserable for the foreigner; and exposure for nights as well as days is unavoidable, because the cutting stations are usually remote from any settle-

In 1895 the first real exportation of quebracho extract from the River Plate was recorded. The increase has been rapid-from 400 tons in the first year to 9.000 tons in 1902, 120,594 tons in the next five years, and 28,195 tons in 1907. Of this quantity the United States received 17,733 tons, or almost 65 per cent

BOOM PREDICTED.

Keen observers predict a big boom new town which is being built in the center of the Little Snake River Valley in Routt County, Colorado. A big irrigation system is being built to irrigate 60,000 acres of very fine land surrounding Wantland. The land is being sold by the State of Colorado for 50 cents per acre, under the Carey Act, and water rights cost $35.00 an acre, in ten year payments. Sugar factories, flour mills, canneries, etc., are among the possible industries to be located at Wantland. HAPPINESS IN ALL THINGS

Can Be Found If One Will Systematically Determine to Look on the Bright Side.

One who is not born a musician needs to toil more assiduously to acquire skill in the art, however strong in his desire or great his taste, than the natural genius. So the persons not endowed with joyous impulses need to set themselves the task of acquiring the habit of happiness. It can be done. The sad, restless or discontented being should begin each morning by resolving to find something in the day to enjoy, to look into each experience which comes for some grain of happiness.

It will be surprising to find how much that has seemed hopelessly disagreeable possesses either an instructive or an amusing side.

Do not anticipate the happiness of tomorrow, but discover it in today. Unless you are in the profound depths of some great despair you will find it if you look for it.

A child should be taught from its earliest life to find entertainment in every kind or condition of weather. If it hears the elders constantly grumbling about such matters, the child's plastic mind is quick to receive the impression that a rainy day or an east wind is a disaster.

Happiness must come from within in order to respond to that which comes from without, just as there must be a musical ear and tempera ment to enjoy music.

CARRIES GERMS OF TYPHOID

Housefly Known to Be Responsible for Spread of This Dreaded Disease.

The housefly killed 1,924 United States soldiers during the Spanish-American war through the medium of typhold fever, more than were killed and wounded by Spanish bullets. There were 22,420 out of 133.513 soldiers, or one man out of seven of the enlisted force of the United States army attacked with the disease.

It has been known for many years that typhoid fever was caused by germs taken through the mouth, but it was not until the Spanish-American war that the housefly was known to be largely responsible for its spread. At Camp Ramsey, Minn., where the Fifteenth Minnesota was in camp, what became known as ill-fated G company was detailed when the regiment left for Georgia to police the camp. Thirty members of the company were taken ill with typhoid fever within a day, and within a week the number increased to 50, nearly half the company. More than 20 men of the flower of the company died. The sudden epidemic has since been charged to the presence of myriads of flies which swarmed the deserted company streets and carried decayed refuse to the cook tent.

His Costly Error.

The lodger's pet aversion was cats. and he cherished a special grudge against a feline which sometimes shared his meals without his consent. Just as he was preparing for bed he caught sight of a suspicious humn under the counterpane. "The brute!" he muttered, and his eyes glared murder as he reached for one of the tenpound dumbells with which he was wont to toy each morning. Stealthily he approached the bed. Then, thud! And one of the items on his next "To one hot-water week's bill was: bottle, $1.25."

The Reason of It. "That woman writer knows a lot about bringing up children, doesn't

"Yes; you see, she never bad any."

Sleep.

The first sleep is the soundestafter the first hour the intensity of sleep slowly diminishes-hence the value of forty winks after dinner in quickly recuperating shattered powers. Temperature and vitality are lowest at about 2:00 a. m., so that two hours' sleep before midnight are worth four thereafter. Nature has no rule as to the length of sleep, except that men need less than women, since women are the more sensitive creatures and a woman's heart beats five times more in a minute than a man's. Sleep should be just so long that when you wake in the morning a stretch and a yawn only are necessary to land you in a daytime of bounding vigor. As to early rising, it is comforting to hear Dr. Bryce say that it is a habit that has gone far to wreck the constitutions of many a growing youth.

Education and Efficiency. Nowhere for many years continuously has the education machine worked more untiringly than in London. Yet of the skilled labor of London two-thirds is done by men and women from the provinces, while seven out of every ten dock laborers and 80 and 90 per cent. of those who seek refuge in night shelters are London born and bred. What does this mean? Is it merely the fierce competition caused by the compelling attraction of London, with its glitter of wages? Or does it prove some fatal weakness in the London schools?-London Saturday Review.

Evidence of Selfishness. "What a beautiful lawn Mr. Blig gins has!"

"Yes," replied the neighbor. "But he isn't entitled to much credit. He keeps mowing it merely for the fun of waking the neighbors early in the morning."
