EATING EGGS by the BILLION

By WILLARD W. GARRISON

UNCLE SAM is the heaviest egg eater in the world. In fact, so fond is the old U. S. A. of the hen product that another century may see the deposition of the bald-headed eagle and the crowning of another feathered monarch.

These United States eat 154,000,000 eggs each day—1,080,000,000 a week—4,620,000,000 a month—56,160,000,000 a year.

Every man, woman and child in the country consumes a little over an egg and a half each day. If you, personally dislike eggs for food there is some one else in some part of America who puts three away as a foundation for his or her breakfast coffee.

Easter week, the biggest egg occasion the year round, sees the consumption of about two billion eggs—violet, pink, crimson, purple, yellow and some green.

That the egg will displace all others as the national food tidbit is the prognostication of those who earn their livings by raising chickens. Chicago, alone, with less than two million population, Easter week last, put away 60,000,000 eggs. So greedy was the Windy city about this article of diet that lots of other portions of the United States which secure their allotment of hen fruit from the market at the city by the lake had to go eggless Easter.

Jim Patten's wheat corner will be a mere bagatelle alongside of the movement of the man who can corner eggs. Small egg corners are frequent, however. Cold storage men often lay aside several millions in a semi-frozen state and hold them for nine months or so, dumping them on the market when the price is in the clouds.

But the cold storage egg is inferior because the fresh egg advocate argues the chicklet has a chance to grow a little before the yellow inside freezes, thus storing up nasal evidence against the purity of the product.

For the housewife in the big city there is an everyday opportunity to effect a coup, for when she can find a producer who sells "eggs laid fresh to-day," she considers herself a model of wifely devotion. But as there is no smell on the outside of the shell, there are often lots of angry glances from the male partner in the household, which are born of the unborn chick.

The length of time that an egg will keep fresh is governed by the care which is taken in its preservation. They are packed in ice as a rule, and if packed soon enough after being laid, the chicken life is properly killed and thus the angry eye-to-eye message is eliminated.

Suitable to the occasion is the aged tale of the man with the flowing mustache and the time-marked egg. He had it for breakfast—the egg—and being a city man rode down to his place of business in conventional manner, taking no notice of the fact that while the seat beside him remained vacant there were half a dozen commuters standing nearby.

As he alighted at his destination a sniff likened to the odor of an egg of evil intentions pierced his nasal sense. During the walk to his office he noticed that the smell was everywhere. It was in the street, in the rotunda of the office building, in the elevator, in the hall on the nineteenth floor, and he was startled beyond measure to find that on entering his office he smelled egg there, too.

Stepping to the desk of the head bookkeeper, he asked him if he smelt an unhealthy odor.

"Why, no," replied the knight of the day ledger casting a glance at the yellow streak clear across the boss' mustache. His stenographer being too polite to remark on the yellow streak, edged toward her in dictating a letter.

He made the rounds of the office employes, asking whether they smelt egg, but all being too polite to tell him he had overlooked an important point, declared they smelt no egg. The odor stayed with him.

In desperation he fled to his private office, muttering as he slammed the door: "My heavens, the whole world smells, and no one knows it but me."

But that is only a minor point in the adoption of a new national food by Uncle Sam. With each year the production of the hens of the country is becoming smaller in proportion to the demand for eggs. As a consequence the experts declare that each succeeding year will see the price soar beyond expectations. The last months of winter and the first of early spring are the hardest for the egg eaters, for then the cost soars, there are less of the precious morsels and those which appear are often holdovers from the year previous, but even those bring prices ranging from 30 to 40 cents a dozen.

The time is remembered by many when the best eggs brought 12 cents a dozen in retail stores, and the wholesale price was below that. So steep has the conventional cost become that thousands of farmers are yearly devoting their land to the raising of fowls.

The industry has already become a mighty factor in national life and within two decades if the country continues to eat eggs at the present rate of increase, the business of growing eggs may outweigh that of cattle and grain.

In the large cities, Chicago, for instance, the high price of meat compelled the poorer classes to adopt the egg as a means of obtaining nourishment. The increased demand of course boosted the price, but still the middle and upper classes cling to the fowl product, foul or fair.

In the great marts of trade the egg industry is perhaps the most interesting of all. One great cold storage warehouse in Chicago during the last egg famine, unloaded on the market close to 6,000,000, and every one was sold to the local retail merchants. The eggs were said to have been in cold storage for nine months, pending an increase in price sufficient to yield the speculators a considerable profit. They estimated the proceeds after all expenses had been met, at four cents on the dozen—$20,000 on the lot.

Other great egg corners have been manipulated and the profits doubtless have been even greater, but they seldom come to the public ear because of the shekels which are raked in from the enterprise.

In the egg corner mentioned above, scores of men worked day and night for two days getting the product out of cold storage to place them on the market while the price held up.

The workmen were where they could be called at once, and the minute the word came over the telephone to get the great crates out of the cold storage warehouse, the toilers were set to work. Two days later every egg had been sold, the money collected and more than half of them eaten by the consumer.

It was a great coup and only one of the many. Other enterprises of like nature where the proceeds have ranged into large figures, have been told, but the details seldom became public property. This, by reason of the fact that the egg "corner" is to-day a rather undeveloped science.

But the monarchs of other branches of the producing world have come to look upon movements of that sort as one of the money makers of the days to come.

Early this month when eggs (cases returned), were bringing only 19 cents a dozen, wholesale, the lover of them felt fairly jubilant and barnyard prognosticators predict that this jubilant feeling shall prevail for the rest of the summer. Extra quality eggs were then selling at 23 cents a dozen, while ordinary "firsts" brought 19 cents and "firsts" one cent more a dozen, "prime firsts" selling at 21 cents.

So, with the sway of the strawberry the price of eggs dropped off, and before August, it is said, the cost may go lower.

With the private producers, who sell only limited quantities of eggs, 40 cents a dozen is not an unheard of figure for what are known as "eggs laid fresh to-day." Of course, the right to that title must be undisputed, and often when eggs are sold, backed by a reputation for freshness, higher prices are paid for them by the epicures.

However, frauds in eggs are as frequent as swindlers in other industries, and fastidious persons, who hate cold storage eggs worse than they do paying fancy prices, are often taken in by the "farmer" who rides into the city on the interurban, buys up a large cargo of eggs in the open market, rents a wagon, the muddier the better, and proceeds to distribute cold storage eggs for the product he claims is "laid fresh to-day."

Helping the Hail.
A certain informed bachelor, one of those the Gateway succeeded in getting on the list during leap year, tells of one of the boys who after attending a farewell bachelor supper meandered home in a muddled state late one Saturday night, or rather Sunday morning, and, getting as far as the entrance of his rooming house, he sat down on the stone steps, his hat fell off on his knees and with head bowed down he slumbered peacefully. He awoke about nine o'clock and found 34 cents in his hat. Charitably inclined early churchgoers had mistaken him for a beggar and dropped their pennies into his upturned hat.—Bremen (Ga.) Gateway.

DETAILED PLAN FOR PRACTICAL FARM BUILDING

Complete Instructions Given for Erection of Structure That Will Accommodate Horses, Cattle, Feed and Other Accessories.

Method of constructing a fresh air in-take in an old barn, using an old window or an opening made for the purpose. Front elevation A and cross section B. Outside opening for the fresh air C, is made by using matched lumber, tarred paper and studding. In this way we have the opening CD, which furnishes air for the stable, allowing it to enter near the ceiling at D.

The great demand for information relating to the construction of dairy buildings led the dairy division of the bureau of animal industry to start a line of investigation for the purpose of developing the basic principles of such construction. In order to make the work thoroughly practical, these studies were extended to the planning and actual supervision of construction of a number of dairy buildings in different sections of the country. The work is still in its formative stages and far from complete, but already promises valuable results in securing better methods of construction. In order to place the matter now available in form for wider distribution and usefulness, a number of plans are here presented, with brief descriptions.

The designs are not intended to represent the only constructions advisable for the purposes indicated, but are intended to be suggestive of certain principles of construction which any architect or builder may use in designing a barn or other dairy building for a special location. No two locations will require or even permit of the same treatment so far as exposure, size, form, or building material are considered; but the problems of ventilation, cubic air space per cow, light, floors, ceilings, etc., are nearly alike in all cases. The designs shown represent feasible and inexpensive dairy buildings, planned by the dairy division and built in various sections of the country. Plans and specifications were furnished to builders, with the understanding that they would keep account of the cost of construction and furnish such other data as might be necessary for a complete description of the work.

A detailed description is given of one design, but the principles are largely the same in all of the plans shown.

The arrangement of the space can be adapted to the needs of the particular location.

Bull pen and box stall. These are approximately 10x10 feet. There is a full window in each stall, providing an abundance of light.

Feed room. This is centrally located; a chute from the silo enters it, also two grain chutes from the upper floor. A hay chute from the loft above deposits the hay in the feeding alley.

Wash room. No dairy barn is complete without a wash room for the milkers and barn attendants, and lockers for their clothes. This room should also contain a small boiler for providing hot water and steam as this is a necessary part of the equipment of a modern dairy barn. Milk scales, record sheets, milk stools, etc., may also be kept there when they are not in use.

Watering. Watering devices may be put in the stable or provided for outside at the option of the builder.

Silo. The silo planned for this barn is 14 feet in diameter and thirty-two feet high, and has a capacity of about 110 tons. This will provide silage for 24 animals for six or eight months.

Details of construction of stalls, stanchions, silos, etc., will be found later on.

The stalls are so designed that stanchions or chain ties may be used. Builders who desire to use patent stalls will find the arrangement of gutter, platform, and feed manger applicable to their use.

Storage of feed. There is no objection to storage above the cow stable proper so long as the floor is similar in construction to the one in the drawing, so as to be kept perfectly tight.

low ceiling on account of the temperature, and this construction admits of chances in this respect.

Ventilation. The plan adapts itself to any system of ventilation. The openings shown give a suggestion as to where the fresh air may be taken in and the impure air discharged.

Driveway to second floor. This is located on one side of the barn, at the end. The main reason for locating the driveway at this point is because it does not shut out any light from the floor below.

The width of this barn is 36 feet 4 inches outside. This allows ample room for the stalls and passageways, and permits of the most economical use of lumber in building. While the length here shown is 84 feet 9 inches, this depends on the number of cows to be handled. The side walls are built of stone or concrete up to the window sills, the balance of the walls being frame. The end walls are constructed of stone or concrete up to the ceiling. A partition extends across the barn so that the cow stable can be entirely shut off.

HANDY SELF-FEEDER FOR HOGS

Works Satisfactorily and Prevents Filth Getting in Feed.

W. E. Gilmour, Henderson Co., Ill., sends an illustration of his method of making a self-feeder for hogs. This feeder is said to work satisfactorily and prevents the hogs from getting their feed filthy.

This self-feeder is attached to the lower side of the corn crib. Our correspondent states that his crib is 16 feet long, 10 feet wide and 10 feet high. In the sketch the self-feeder is represented as it would appear at the bottom of the crib on one side.

The trough is 16 feet long and made of two boards 12 inches wide—one for the top and the other for the bottom. The board from C to B is on a slant. The holes shown at E, which are just large enough for the hogs to get their noses in, are eight inches apart.

Lame Shoulder in Horse.—Whenever a horse owner is in doubt in regard to the location of lameness in one or both front limbs, he invariably selects the shoulder or shoulders, as it may happen, as the probable seat of the lameness.

In the majority of cases the theory of shoulder lameness proves to be a grave mistake on the part of the owner, and an unnecessary cruelty to the patient. It is a well-known fact which has been well demonstrated by practical experience that there is no such thing as denying the truth of the assertion that the foot of the horse is more commonly the seat of lameness than any other part of the fore limb.

Subacute lameness, sometimes known as chronic founder, is a very common cause of lameness, located in one or both feet of the horses, and if I am not very much mistaken, the patient I am required to prescribe for is the victim of this indescribable lameness. The only treatment I can suggest for horses with chronic founder is to use them exclusively for slow work on the farm.

TUBERCULOSIS COLONY AT LAKE
 Physicians of Omaha to Establish a Sanitarium for the Cure of the White Plague.

Thor Jorgenson has disposed of his holdings at Pries lake to the Oak Park Sanitarium company, of which he is a stockholder, which will establish a modern sanitarium to cure tuberculosis.
 Victims of "white plague" in Nebraska will have all the modern and scientific treatment of the dread disease after July 15, when the tuberculosis tent colony on Pries lake, north of Florence, will be opened.
 Instead of being housed in closed apartments, where free air is almost impossible, they will lounge by day in hammocks and sleep by night in open tents on an elevation far above Omaha and vicinity.
 What physicians the world over prescribe for consumptives will be given—fresh air, nutritious food and pure water.
 Plans for the materialization of the anti-tuberculosis crusade reached a head this week when the Oak Park Sanitarium company was incorporated with the promised support of many of the leading physicians of Nebraska.
 The incorporators were Dr. A. F. Tyler, Dr. E. G. Barnhardt of the Nebraska State Medical Journal, and Thor Jorgenson, although the stockholders will include many prominent physicians in the state, it is expected.
 The company, which is capitalized at $50,000, has bought thirty-five acres of land on Pries lake. At present there are two large cottages, a large pavilion and two ice houses on the tract, but plans are being prepared for a $20,000 hospital building, which will be modern in every respect.
 In the main building will be a large dormitory, a laboratory, an operating room, and the offices of the physicians.
 The Poole law, which provides for the care of indigent consumptives by the county at a cost of $10 a week, takes effect July 9, and it will be the aim of the physicians connected with the tent colony to care for this class of patients.
 The law provides that all modern methods be employed in caring for the county charges, and as the Pries lake colony will be the only one that will meet the requirements of the law it is believed that many state patients will be cared for.
 Dr. Tyler said that there were over 100 indigent consumptives in Douglas county.
